Did You Know?

Xerox was the first company to develop a process for recycling waste toner. This container is used in a variety of products including 5090, 5390, 5690, DocuTech 135, 6100, 6115, 6135, 6155, 6180, and DocuPrint 4135, 463, 100, 115, 135, 155, and 180.

Today, Xerox will recycle numerous used printer supplies as part of the Xerox Green World Alliance. Used Xerox Cartridges, also referred to as toner or drum cartridges, 5090 Waste Toner, Empty Toner Bottles, iGen3 Components, Fuser Cartridges and Xerox branded HP Replacement Cartridges can ALL be recycled through Xerox.

Focus on Legal

Evidence shows Xerox helps law firms recover more billable hours: The sheer volume of paperwork passing through a law firm makes document management critical to the outcome of any case or matter. Tracking all that paper is also required for efficient client building. That's why the ABA/Xerox agreement is such a significant advantage to law firms. It allows you to purchase high-quality, reliable Xerox equipment at very special prices.

From innovative digital multifunction machines that streamline productivity and access to information, to color-enabled products that call attention to important parts of contracts and other legal documents, Xerox designs office products to help you end the paper chase.

- > Is your 55ppm machine really printing at 55 pages per minute? Machines that claim to be 55ppm actually slow down significantly when placed in a busy network environment. In tests, the Xerox WorkCentre Pro printed up to 3.5 times faster than the competition.
- > Can your copier Bates Stamp? Xerox offers a suite of Bates Stamping solutions that automate the document annotation and scan tracking, accounting and billing processes.
- > How much time and money does your staff waste retyping client documents? With Optical Character Recognition and Image Editing Software, scanned images may be converted into revisable text documents. Now you can revise a document without losing their native format.

Why the ABA picked Xerox: The ABA/Xerox program was reviewed by lawyers, for lawyers, with special attention to the quality and pricing that busy legal professionals demand. From contracts, depositions and Bates stamping to tracking prints and copies and client correspondence, Xerox products are known for delivering professional, high-quality applications.
